SEAFOOD INDUSTRY PROVING BOON TO ECONOMY ALONG GULF COAST

Boats like these shrimp trawlers, which in Fall are converted to oyster vessels, account for millions of dollars worth of seafood which reaches dinner tables the nation over.

Cotton still is king in the Gulf of Mississippi, but the growing shrimp and oyster industry is rapidly becoming a major factor in the economy of the Gulf Coast, and the Gulf of Mexico. The shrimp and oyster industry, which according to the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service, is the largest of other industries along the Gulf Coast, has more than 1,500 boats and 10,000 people are employed in the picturesque seafood industry, which according to present trends, is growing rapidly.

The yield of oysters has increased in the Gulf during the first half of 1955, compared with the same period in 1954, according to the Mississippi Seafood Commission. Indications also show that this year's shrimp catch on the coast will exceed that of last year.

In the year ending July, 1954, a total of 295,114 barrels of oysters were caught, while 54,795 barrels of shrimp were taken by fishermen along the Coast. Altogether this year a total of 235,000 barrels of oysters have been brought in, while the shrimp take totals 41,892 barrels with a peak fishing season not yet reported.

The 15-mile strip of Coast boasts 35 plants which pack, can, deep freeze and process this abundant harvest of the Gulf. These industries represent a multi-million dollar industry which provides employment and payrolls for a large segment of the population and which supports numerous other servicing industries.

A major portion of the boats which operate along the Coast are engaged in catching shrimp and oysters, but each year since World War II an increasing number of boats have been added to the fleets of menhaden, pompano, and other fish. This small oil production is another of the post-war developments of this area.

There are optimistic hopes now for another new fishing industry, Tuna canning.

In 1955, the Department of Commerce declared a "fishing year" to the Gulf Coast for the purpose of scaling out the various types of commercial fishing vessels. The data regarding the past few years the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service's exploratory vessel Oregon has made interesting catches of tuna, tuna, and tuna. The first catch in 1951 when they were first seen in Gulf Coast waters in sufficient numbers to warrant further investigation.

Purpose of recent expeditions has been to determine the depth at which the tuna were running, to determine the best method for catching them, and to find out in what seasons fishing is best. Catches during the past year of both tuna and deep running shrimp have created considerable interest and optimism in the seafood industry.

Commercial Tuna companies, most of which are located on the West Coast, especially have been interested in results of the Gulf tests since Tuna fleets operating from the Gulf Coast would be considerably closer to the fishing grounds than from San Diego, center of the industry now.

A great majority of the population of the Gulf Coast, especially Biloxi, who glean their livelihood from the seafood industry are directly employed on shrimp trawlers and oyster boats, or work in factories which provide the nation's dinner tables with the succulent seafood cocktails which most of us take for granted.

A smaller, though still large number, have been prospering in the industry related to the perpetuation of the important industry, although not all of them are directly connected with the business of fishing.

It takes a small army of people to keep the shrimp boat coming and going.

Shipbuilding alone is a sizeable industry along the Coast, providing employment for many people. A current directory of manufacturers in Mississippi lists 16 boat building establishments on the Coast, exclusive of the giant Ingalls Shipbuilding Corporation yards at Pascagoula. In addition to the men who build the boats for the fishing fleet, the industry requires machinists, trawl makers, ice manufacturers, marine hardware dealers, engine companies, grocers, distributors of fuel and many others offering such services.

In the Fall of the year the shrimp fleet converts a major portion of its fleet to oyster rigs. Boats must be boxed in, necessitating use of marine ways. Bulky guide posts must be installed from which rollers serve out the steel cables to the Gulf's bottom where the 140-pound steel-toothed dredges rake the bottom for the much sought bivalves.

There is a constant flow of business. Boats are ever in need of repair and must be hauled out on the ways periodically.

Additional auxiliary businesses upon which the seafood industry depend are the marine hardware and supply dealers and the marine engine companies. They supply an endless stream of paints, chains, anchors, buckets, scales, ropes, cleats, compasses, shovels, rakes, tongs, and the hundreds of other odds and ends necessary to commercial fishing.

Trawl manufacturers and machine shops also are kept busy, as is the grocer who supplies the provisions for extended excursions into the Gulf.

All of these are private businesses, independent of the seafood industry and yet owing a great deal to this important segment of the economy of the area.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Gillon and children and Mrs. Sam Gillon visited Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Gillon in Greenwood on Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Gillon's friends are sorry to learn illness struck her again last Wednesday, but are happy she had almost overcome a stroke earlier in the year.

Promises of God

Lesson for August 21, 1955

MANY Christians today become confused when they read the prophecies of the Old Testament. They do not seem to be either plain or profitable, because they are written in a strange style and the reader has no way of knowing, without help, just where and when and to whom these words were first spoken or written. This column is much to short a space for straightening out the tangles in even one chapter. The thing to bear in mind is that there is enough in Scripture that is plain to any man, enough to give him all he needs to know about God and his will for us. This column this week will consider one general thought: the promises of God, as they are found in the pages of the prophets particularly.

Dr. Foreman

The Prophet

The promises of God are never made directly, as by a loudspeaker in the sky. The same promise may be made to many persons; but not all at once. The message first takes shape under the skill of one man, a holy, sensitive man, with spiritual insight, generally with great courage, and persistence. In short, a prophet. We do not know for certain just what the process is by which a divine truth gets into the human mind of the prophet, but when that divine truth enters the human sphere, it comes as an idea, a thought, in some prophet's mind. Sometimes more than one prophet may say the same thing as when Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel were all predicting the return of the Jews to Jerusalem. Sometimes the prophet stands entirely alone. But the prophet is like the lookout in the crow's nest of a ship, sighting the dim landfall before any one on deck can see it.

The Promise

Sometimes the signal the prophet's keen spirit caught from an high spelled disaster, sometimes it was like "news behind news," a commentary on the why of events in past or present. But often, indeed more often than anything else, the message of the prophet is a promise. You can sum up all the promises there are into one sentence: "God is good; he desires the good of all his children; and he will bring good to pass. One writer in the New Testament suggests that the prophets did not always understand their own messages; they were like radio receivers crossed by static. Be that as it may, we know from reading the Gospels that the people who read the prophets, even the professional interpreters, did not always understand what they read. The promises were set in obscure language, often in poetry. One feature, however, is clear. The focus and center of the prophet's hope and dream was the Messiah. It is true, their descriptions were so misread that when Jesus Christ came, most of his fellow-countrymen, measuring him by the literal words of these promises, did not recognize him. But there were those who did. The Christian discovers that all the best good that God desires for his children is summed up in Christ and what he does for men.

The Present

What can a Christian today do with the promises passed on by the prophets? Some of them refer no doubt to events long since past, as when Ezekiel and Jeremiah predicted the destruction of Babylon. The Christian can take such promises to support his faith that God does rule in the history of men; that his decrees are certain, his foreknowledge sure. Some of the promises are still unfulfilled, as when a prophet predicts the utter destruction of evil from this earth and the coming of a time of universal peace. A Christian can live by such hope even when (just as in the prophet's own days) the hope seems out of reach entirely. Where the prophet speaks of God's Servant the Coming One, we can use such promises to deepen our understanding of what Christ is to mean to the world. But every once in a while, in reading the prophets, one discovers that spans past, present and future. It was a promise made good long ago; it will come true in centuries to come; it is true this present hour. Such a promise is to be found, for instance, in Isaiah 55:6-7.

In a ceremony of dignity and beauty Sunday, August 14, Miss Mimi Williams, daughter of Mrs. E. W. Williams and the late Mr. Williams, became the bride of Wilford E. Raper, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Raper of Memphis.

The wedding ceremony was conducted at two o'clock in the afternoon at the First Baptist Church, with the pastor, Dr. John Landrum, officiating.

Soft tapers from wrought iron holders and staty floor baskets of white shade against a background of greenery formed the decorations of the sanctuary. Vows were exchanged beneath a white arch entwined with plumosis fern. Tapers were lighted by Bill Orr and Marvin Cutler.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. John Griffith Hardy, organist, and Mrs. Steve Smith, vocalist.

In Import Organdy

The bride, given in marriage by her cousin, Lamar Sledge of DeKalb, wore an original by Ina of import Swiss eyelet embroidered organdy over nylon tulle over cotton satin. The entire fabric was embroidered in miniature dots.

Miniature buttons fastened the petit pointed basque, and the decolature portrait neck was completed with natural eyelet scallop. The bodice featured brief scalloped sleeves and detachable fitted gauntlets buttoned from elbow to rosepoint over the hand.

The three gathered skirts developed over Natchez hoops into voluminous folds extending with the chapel train the outer skirts having side banners of scalloped tier upon tier graduating in width from the amputative waist.

Her double tier waist-length veil was of misty bridal illusion. Hand rolled hems fell gracefully in numerous points from a head plateau of brandy with flowerets applied with seed pearls.

Her only jewelry was a single strand of pearls, a gift of the groom, and she carried a white prayer book surmounted by a white orchid encircled with tuberose and stephanotis.

Bridesmaid in Blue

Miss Barbara Williams, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Mary Jane Raper, sister of the groom, Miss Judy Lake, Miss Shirley Stoker, and Miss Alma Dubard.

Feminine attendants wore identical gowns of sea blue Swiss organdy over taffeta, fashioned with bouffant skirts and softly draped necklines. They wore matching gloves and feathered pompadour bands attached to masque veils. Their cascade bouquets of white carnations were caught with blue satin bows and nylon puffs.

Serving as best man was the groom's father. Groomsmen were James Latham, Marvin Cutler, Bill Orr and Bobby Abels.

Mrs. Williams chose for her daughter's wedding a stunning model of blue chantilly lace over taffeta. The deep rounded neckline was appliqued with seed pearls and iridescent sequins. Her hat was of white lace and her corsage of white carnations.

The groom's mother was attired in a short sheath dress of blue brocade cotton satin with scoop neckline. She wore a black velvet hat and a white carnation corsage.

Church Reception

A reception honoring the wedding party was held at the church immediately following the ceremony.

The bride's table, overlaid with an imported linen cutwork cloth over blue, was centered by a silver epergne holding a white floral arrangement. The tiered cake was frosted with roses and wedding bells and topped by a miniature bride and groom.

Assisting in serving were Miss Heidi Moore, Miss Martha Page, Miss Margaret Mitchell, Miss Barbara McCurdy, Mrs. R. H. Connerley, and Mrs. Wayne Farrill. Miss Nell Rose Bain presided at the guest book.

The couple left for a wedding trip to Florida. Mrs. Raper wearing a sheath ensemble of true blue cotton and orlen shantung with matching velvet hat, navy accessories and the orchid from her bridal bouquet.

They will reside in San Antonio, Texas, where the groom is stationed at Kelly Air Force Base.

Among the out-of-town guest at the wedding and reception were Mr. and Mrs. William C. Patridge of Panama City, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. O's Oison of Houston, Texas; Mrs. Lamar Sledge and James Sledge of Dekalb; Mr. and Mrs. C. W. York of Pontotoc; Mr. and Mrs. J. C. McCurdy and Mrs. Maud Nelson of Pope; Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Ousley, Miss Mildred Calvert, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Williams, Miss Mary Ruth Williams and L. C. Williams, Jr. of West Point.

This Second Primary Campaign For Governor
Is A Contest Between Two Ways of Life

One is the American Way, the Mississippi Way, the Traditional Way — which guarantees the opportunity for any person to rise from a humble beginning to become a great Minister, a great Lawyer, a great Doctor, or a faithful Public Servant, IF he is willing to work, IF he prepares himself, and IF he proves himself worthy in lesser places BEFORE he asks for a position of higher trust and responsibility.

The other way is the one from which our forefathers fled more than 200 years ago. When they wrote the Constitution of the United States, they were careful to provide that there should be no titles of nobility and no system by which the son could succeed to the position of honor, trust, and authority of the father, simply by right of inheritance.

Judge J. P. Coleman has always stood for:

- The preservation of the public schools
- The absolute maintenance of segregation
- Honest government in all its phases
- The fair regulation of public utilities
- And all the other planks in his program which the people approved by their votes in the first primary.

If elected on August 23rd, J. P. COLEMAN, will not betray YOUR confidence in him.

Cast a vote for Mississippi on August 23rd. Vote for J. P. COLEMAN. He will ever remain humbly grateful and prayerfully devoted to the service of all the people of Mississippi.

JUDGE J. P. COLEMAN

Approved by Henry Maddox, Campaign Manager

TO THE PEOPLE OF GRENADA COUNTY

Do you realize that the Circuit Clerk's Office is your business?

Do you know the man you elect to serve you as Circuit Clerk for the next four years will face the hardest four years in the history of Grenada County?

Have you stopped to think the man you elect as Circuit Clerk will be responsible for the future of Grenada County?

My friends of Grenada County, I have tried hard to make and maintain a reputation as a man that would not embarrass me to come before the good people of Grenada County for any thing at any time, and I am proud to say there is nothing in my past that I will have to try to cover with the good word — "sympathy."

As a public servant I have given you my best — striving at all time to make your Circuit Clerk's Office a clean and better place of business second to none in the State of Mississippi.

My friends, I want to be your Circuit Clerk for the next four years because I know what you want and I have what it takes to give you what you want.

If you will elect me your Circuit Clerk on August 23rd, I make you this promise from the bottom of my heart, I will personally see that the Circuit Clerk's Office is run in the way that the overwhelming majority of the people of Grenada County want it run.

For SOBER, qualified, courteous and efficient service, go to the polls on August 23rd and make your X for C. J. (Charlie) Worsham for Circuit Clerk.

Your friend,

C. J. (Charlie) WORSHAM
